North and South Unite in Celebration of Memorial Day on Nation's Bloodiest Battlefield.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 30.—Standing on historic Gettysburg barge, the United States representative Thomas Hefflin of Alabama, today paid eloquent tribute to the heroism of the men who wore the blue and the gray. His was the first address ever delivered by a Southerner at Gettysburg Memorial Day exercises.

"Our colonial fathers from North, South and East and West," Mr. Hefflin said, "fought together when they believed in a united country. They fought together in the way of 1812, and triumphed together when they carried the stars and stripes into the hermitage of the Montezumas. The final and crucial test of the republic's strength and durability was the combat of the field of battle in the war between the states."

"He added that the question of the right of the state to secede and the right of the union to preserve the status of rights and relationship between state and federal government, could not be determined in the councils of peace; it had to be settled by the arbitrament of the sword."

"The republic once surrounded with conflicting opinions as to state and federal rights and powers," he continued, "is today the harmonious household of sovereign states, the home of a brave and happy people. Here we show solemn reverence in honor of our nation's dead and pay to their blessed memory the tribute of our united love."

"Heroism never had truer representatives than those who made this battlefield immortal. Here the soldier in blue and the soldier in gray read in each other's eyes courage born of convictions, devotion to principle, a willingness to do and die for what they believed was right. Here Union and Confederate soldiers by their daring sacrifice and heroism challenged the admiration of the world. Here Northern valor drew up in battle line the bravest of her brave, the noblest specimens of her patriotic manhood. And Southern chivalry marshalled the noblest types of her splendid citizenship."

"Here the brave Union soldier checked the march of the hillside in the red glare of destructive battle fire. Two mighty lessons were taught: one that the Union should be preserved and the other that the Union should be the rights of the states. So the soldiers of the two armies who baptized this soil with their blood did not die in vain; they started the work of cementing the bonds of an everlasting union."

"I bring to you a message of good will and fellowship from the people of the South. As an evidence of our recognition and appreciation of the valor and heroism of both Union and Confederate soldiers, I have taken the spirit of fraternal love now permeating the hearts of our people, I bring you floral offerings from the flower gardens of Dixie, one for the grave of the soldier in blue and the other for the grave of the soldier in gray. The sublime valor of the heroes of both armies is the priceless heritage of all."

"Of the reunion in July of survivors of the two armies at Gettysburg, Mr. Hefflin said, 'What a glorious reunion that will be. The angels will smile upon that gathering and the God of our fathers will bless and approve it.' Let the living join hands and hearts about a common center for the good of the republic," he concluded. "Let North, South, East, West all work together for the good of all. Here on this battlefield incarnated with the blood of patriotic North and patriots South, let us in the language of Lincoln resolve that this government shall not perish from the earth."

Afternoon Alarm: The motor fire truck was dispatched to the Lincoln school yesterday afternoon to extinguish a fire in a pile of rubbish which had caught in a fence and threatened to spread to a nearby barn. Chemicals were sufficient to extinguish the blaze.

Interesting Ceremonies Mark Occasion—Famous Poem of Whittier Read by His Grand-Niece.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Frederick, Md., May 30.—The body of Barbara Frietche, heroine of Whittier's poem, and that of her husband, John C. Frietche, which were recently disinterred from the old Returned Congregation Cemetery here, were formally deposited in the new mausoleum in Mt. Olivet Cemetery today. The reburial was made an occasion for interesting ceremonies which were conducted by the G. A. R. and other patriotic organizations. A feature of the program was the recitation of Whittier's poem by Miss Medora Matz, a grand-niece of Barbara Frietche.

Barbara Frietche was born in Lancaster, Pa., December 2, 1766. Her maiden name was Barbara Hauer. As a young woman she removed to Frederick with her parents and in 1806 was married to John C. Frietche, a glove manufacturer and merchant. When on September 6, 1862, Frederick was invaded by the Confederate army, she was taken to the same route as the "Star-Spangled Banner" to be seen flying in the breeze. This was displayed in the little dormer window of a quaint old house in West Patrick street, the home of the Frietches. The entire body of the Confederate army marched directly past the house on Friday, September 12, and on the next morning the eyes of the old lady were gladdened by the sight of the Federalists who, taking the same route as the Confederates, followed closely on their footsteps. Mrs. Frietche did not long survive the episode which inspired Whittier to write his famous poem. She died less than three months later, on December 10, 1862, at the age of 96 years.

Paris, May 30.—Myron Thierick, United States ambassador to France, today placed a wreath on the tomb of Lafayette, Consul General Frank Mason, the entire staff of the American embassy and a number of American residents in Paris, were present at the ceremonies.

Ambassador Page and his secretary wore ordinary evening dress which American diplomats always assumed at Levees with the naval and military attaches in uniform they drove from the hotel to the American embassy in royal carriages with the coachmen and footmen in the scarlet liveries of the British court.

During the royal carriages passing through Mayfair to Buckingham Palace attracted considerable attention. Speaking of the audience afterwards, Ambassador Page said: "It was one of the most pleasing experience of my life. The king and queen spoke frankly, cordially and kindly on a number of subjects. They asked after President Wilson and his family and also after my own family."

American Liner Haverford Towed Into Queenstown Harbor This Morning Badly Wrecked.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Queenstown, May 30.—Several powerful tugs towed the American liner steamship Haverford into harbor this morning. They released her from her dangerous position in Rocky Bay immediately west of Cork Head at high tide at one o'clock. She had been lying on the rocks since yesterday afternoon, when with 134 cabin and 850 steerage passengers aboard, she went ashore in a dense fog. When she was brought into port today she was down by the bows with 21 feet of water in her fore hold and a considerable quantity in No. 2 hold.

The vessel will be patched up as soon as workmen and material can reach her and will then go Liverpool for a thorough repair. The efforts to float the Haverford began some time before high water. Three tugs were placed astern to tow her into deep water and another one at the bow to keep her steady.

As the tide reached its highest point the liner was gradually released. As it was still foggy it was decided to anchor off Cork Head until daylight. Then the vessel was slowly brought into harbor here.

Rock Bay where the Haverford struck is in a very exposed position and had the weather been at all rough the steamer would have been a total loss. The rescued passengers, nearly a thousand in number, gathered today at various points of vantage along the shore in order to get a close view of the damaged steamer.

All the baggage belonging to the cabin passengers of the Haverford has been landed and they are to be placed on New York on the Baltic. It is not yet known to what extent the freight and heavy baggage of other passengers have been damaged.

UNVEIL NATIONAL MAINE MONUMENT
IN CENTRAL PARK

Great Naval and Military Display Accompanies Dedication Ceremony—Cabinet Members Present.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, May 30.—With a grand naval and military parade, with cheering crowds, and in the presence of a distinguished company, the National Maine monument, erected by popular subscription in honor of the United States sailors who met death in the explosion of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor just prior to the Spanish-American war, was unveiled this afternoon in Columbus Circle, at the southwest entrance to Central Park. It was a gala day in the city. The Stars and Stripes floated from all the public buildings and from thousands of business houses and private residences. Fifth Avenue was lined with spectators who cheered enthusiastically from the sidewalks. The Maine monument, a masterpiece of sculpture, was unveiled from the 50th Street, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Virginia, New Jersey and half a dozen other of the great dreadnoughts detailed by the Navy Department to attend the unveiling.

The speakers' rostrum in Columbus Circle was handsomely decorated with shields, coats of arms, naval pennants and large brass eagles. In the center of the rostrum was a flagstaff, from the peak of which the Stars and Stripes waved in the breeze. All the large buildings in the immediate vicinity of the Circle were decorated with flags and bunting.

The unveiling ceremonies were of an impressive character, beginning with an invocation by Father Chidwick, who was chaplain of the ill-fated battleship. Other leading participants in the program were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Admiral Bagge, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, Governor Haines of Maine, Governor Sulzer of New York and Mayor Gaynor of New York city. The actual unveiling was performed by Frederick D. Over of the Department of Public Buildings and Grounds in Washington.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies Father Chidwick deposited a handsome wreath at the base of the memorial in honor of the United States Government. Similar floral tributes were presented by Governor Haines for the State of Maine and Governor Sulzer for the State of New York.

The principal part of the monument proper consists of a 222-foot, and 40 feet high with a base of 100 feet. It is flanked by two colossal figures, representing the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, suggestive of the national scope of the memorial. The figures are typical of a young man in the fullness of an old man half slumbering. The figures would be over fourteen feet high.

At the foot of the shaft and facing the circle is a group of sculpture representing the flight of Peace, while Fortitude supports the feeble. These are figures nearly twice actual life-size. The group is the following inscription: "The Maine—by fate unwarned, in death unafraid."

On the lower part of the pedestal supporting this group is a convention of the Maine people, beginning with a boy holding a wreath of olive and laurel, suggesting the new era inaugurated in Cuba through the Spanish war. A low fountain basin extends toward the circle from this side of the monument, approached by three broad steps, each side of the pedestal. The corresponding group on the side facing the park is post-bellum in motif—Justice, having entrusted her sword to the Genius of War, receives it again as he hands her the History records its deeds as follows: "To the freemen who died in the war with Spain that others might be free."

The principal group is a group representing Columbus's triumphant return. This group is in bronze, cast from guns recovered from the sunken Maine and is heavily gilded. The group is seventy feet high, making the monument fifty-seven feet in height. All the other sculpture is of Knoxville marble. In panels on the lateral faces of the shaft are inscribed the names of those to whom the monument is dedicated.

At either side of the pylon and separated from it by two park roads are two entrances formed by four garden houses of the type familiar in the parks abroad. Each pair of houses is connected by a gateway. There is one of these gates on each side of the footpaths and partially connected by a low wall and with seats facing the circle. The pylon itself and the house and the wall are of Tennessee marble, with a granite base of a similar shade of color.

Wallace-Fosseen Law Came Into Effect Today—Disreputable Resorts Classified as Nuisances.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

St. Paul, Minn., May 30.—The Wallace-Fosseen law, enacted by the Minnesota legislature with a view to suppressing disorderly and gambling resorts by preventing the use of property for improper purposes, came into effect today. The law has several unique features. Under its provisions any citizen may begin a civil action to abate a nuisance, the resort being classified as nuisances. Any attorney may prosecute the action which will be brought in the name of the state. If the court finds that the charges are true an order will be issued closing the property for one year, confiscating the household goods in the places and ordering the sale and firing the property owner $300. Under the law the property owner is presumed to be aware of the purpose to which the property is being put. The attorney prosecuting the case, if successful, is allowed to recover 70 per cent of the fines and the amount realized from the sale of goods. To guard against an abuse of the law it is provided that the court, if convinced that an action is being brought in bad faith, may dismiss the case and assess the costs against the citizen who brought it.

Legislature Considering And Adopting Measures Regarding Northern Agriculture Development.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, May 30.—Several measures looking to the agricultural development of northern Wisconsin have been considered by the legislature and some have already been adopted. Among the latter are the Guilekson joint resolution for a constitutional amendment permitting counties, cities, towns and villages to exempt certain classes of property from taxation, and the Nye joint resolution for a constitutional amendment permitting the state to establish a system of state loans to farmers. The Guilekson amendment would make it possible for the legislature to authorize counties and towns, where a majority of the voters so desired, to exempt buildings and other improvements on land from all taxation and to put the entire burden of local taxation, aside from the income tax, on the land itself. This, it is claimed, would greatly aid in the settlement of the northern counties, first, by encouraging the farmer, and second, by discouraging the operations of the idle land speculator.

The Nye amendment is designed to meet the great need of settlement on the out-of-the-way lands of the state. The tenant farmers of the southern counties—for a system of long-time farm loans. This amendment, however, cannot become part of the state constitution until it has been adopted by the legislature on or before May 31, and accepted by the people of the state. A bill has therefore been introduced into the senate to permit counties to aid farmers in securing funds for farm development.

This bill is senate bill number 431 which was introduced by the committee on conservation. The bill as now contained in the substitute amendment, which was adopted by the senate last week, provides that the county board of any county of the state may issue bonds and loan their proceeds on the security of farm lands to settlers within their county to aid them in draining their land or in removing from it such stumps, brush, fallen or standing timber or stones, as prevent an efficient use of the land for agricultural purposes. Any county board which takes advantage of the proposed act must elect two persons to serve with a third person appointed by the governor of the state as members of a board to be known as the county reclamation board. The board is to be charged with the carrying out of the provisions of the act with respect to the examination of lands offered as security for loans, the investigation of the desirability of the land, and the making of a report to the legislature.

The board is to be composed of the county clerk and the chairman of the board of supervisors, and may at any time within that period. Loans are to be of not less than one hundred nor more than two thousand dollars and are not to exceed seven per cent of the value of the land accepted as security, exclusive of the value of buildings and other perishable improvements, when reclaimed as proposed in the petitions for the loans. The rate of interest to be charged on the loans is to be sufficient to cover the rate paid by the county on the bonds which it issues to secure the funds loaned, plus the expense incurred by the county in administering the system of loans.

Although the system will be entirely self-supporting, it is believed that the counties which use it will be able to furnish loans to settlers with the proper security at rates of interest considerably lower than those now being charged. The additional advantage of being able to obtain a loan for a long term of years without the payment of a commission and with the privilege of repaying the loan in installments will enable settlers in the northern counties to make much more rapid progress in developing their farms than they are able to make at the present time.

The ruling the attorney general goes into a long legal discussion of similar appropriations to different associations. In another opinion rendered today the attorney general holds that the bill introduced in the legislature by Assemblyman David V. Jennings of Milwaukee, authorizing the common council of any city in the state to abolish any city office, is unconstitutional.

"In my opinion no bill embodying the general idea of this bill can be drawn in such a manner to be constitutional," says the opinion in response to a question as to what changes would be necessary to relieve the bill of unconstitutional objections. "A bill that by its terms abolishes some particular city office and provides that it shall not go into effect in any municipality until the election of the municipality have by their votes accepted its terms, would, in my opinion be valid. I very seriously doubt the validity of any provision by which any office can be abolished and recreated at the option of the municipality. After the office is once abolished it would require a new law by the legislature which would create the office. But leave the time of its taking effect in the hands of the municipality for the favorable action of such municipality."

MEMORIAL DAY.
Today the veterans of two wars commemorate the departed, the men who gave their lives up for the flag in the strenuous days of the great struggle between North and South, and those who later answered the last bugle call and have gone to the grand rest above the clouds.

There was dedicated on the battlefield of Gettysburg a monument for the men who fell in the bloody struggle. At that time the greatest of Americans, Abraham Lincoln, made one of the most memorable addresses ever given on the American continent, or in the world itself. It is simple, it is short, it is sublime, it is beautiful. On this day of days it is fitting to republish it so that the present generation can understand the great struggle and what today means.

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

"Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any other nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this."

"But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power, to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain, that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

CALLED TO TIME.
The Wall Street Journal calls President Wilson to time in the following editorial relative to the pending tariff measure:
"President Wilson is not showing his usual sportsmanship in dealing with those who do not swallow hook, bob and sinker, his ideas in regard to the 659 paragraphs of the pending tariff bill. He seems to think the business men who are hurt, or think they are hurt, ought to stand up, with their backs to the wall and their hands tied, and make no resistance or outcry, while he pummels them to his heart's content."

When the president objects to the use of money for advertising on the part of business men who fear the results of his tariff plan, he seems to forget that his opponents have no means at their command such as he possesses for reaching the public. He does not need to pay money to enforce his views or get them before the country, because he has strong arms in his ability to reach every newspaper reader through the Associated Press, the hunger of members of congress for delayed patronage, and the mighty power of party discipline.

"Come, Mr. President, be a 'good sport.' If the other fellow gets in a 'good' temper, don't squeal! The country is the umpire, and it has shown a disposition to be more than fair to you in its decisions; but it does not admire a squealer."

THE G. A. R.
No organization in the world is more distinctive than the Grand Army of the Republic. No nation of this earth has as similar organization. No nation could. In the words of a past commander of this great organization, no child can be born into it; no professional president, 'edict of king or czar can command admission; no university or institution of learning can issue a diploma authorizing its holder to enter; no act of congress or of parliament secures recognition; the wealth of a Vanderbilt can not purchase the position; its doors swing open only upon presentation of a bit of paper, torn, worn, begrimed with age, which certifies to an honorable discharge from the armies or navies of the nation during the war against rebellion.

Its ranks can never be recruited. As one member answers the last roll there is no one to take his place and his vacant place in the ranks can never be filled. Its lines are swiftly becoming thinner and thinner and its ranks more serried and battle worn. Today the world pays tribute to them. It is their day and they glory in it and until the bugle sounds taps over the grave of the last survivor they will stand as sentinels on the picket line guarding the great encampment of their departed comrades.

If the state fair is not moved to Janesville from Milwaukee still the legislative committee is certain that Janesville is a city of some importance and to be considered in its opinions and at the conclusion of yesterday's hearing at Madison is to be considered.

Governor McGovern objects to having the legislature take a recess for some months and leave their present all unfinished. He is wise in his stand and while it will inconvenience some of the members it may work a world of good in the end.

There is a respite in the Roosevelt trial today and Judge, Jury, Plaintiff and witnesses will celebrate the holiday while the dear public waits breathless for the verdict of the jury.

Metamorphosis.
When the statesmen go to Washington they are brimful of reform. They are for the common people. And they rant and rave and storm.

Diagnosing the conditions.
They set forth the people's ills. And they load the good old hopper with their remedial pills.

For two weeks in January.
They kick up an awful dust. Any they blow until you're fearful. That they're really going to bust.

Then they quiet down serenely. And no longer tear their hair. And the folks in February wonder if they still are there.

Then the statesmen are forgotten. Till along in June you learn that the legislative body's getting ready to adjourn.

It is easy to make speeches. And of grave reforms to shout. But it's somewhat different when it comes to carryin' 'em out.

Promises are stock in trade with Statesmen who are seeking fame, But old Ultimate Consumer keeps on digging just the same.

A fellow came through this section and tried to sell Old Man Hicks a horse. "This horse goes ten miles without stoppin'," he said. "Well," replied Old Man Hicks, "I don't want a horse that goes ten miles without stoppin'." "Only live eight miles from town and I don't want to walk back two miles every time."

Tire Trouble.
We have often thought that it was a very lucky thing for Job that he never had an automobile or that an ancient worthy would never have gained terrific reputation for patience which made him famous.

Job had many troubles, but he never experienced the daddys of 'em all—the tire trouble.

Tire trouble happens in the best regulated families and it is the suddenest thing in the world. It is even suddener than a bill from a plumber.

The sun may be shining and the little birds singing blithely and a man may be riding along a country road, admiring the scenery and explaining the infallibility of his car to relatives or friends, and he may say: "I have never had a particle of trouble with this car since I have owned it," when

BANG!!

And there is no more joy in life. The sun goes under a cloud and the little birds hide their heads in their tail feathers.

The man doesn't know whether he has just lost $40 or $50 and he is afraid to get out and look it all over. He stands on the size of the report. A loud bang like the boom of a thirteen-inch naval gun is supposed to cost $30, while a small bang like that of a firecracker is supposed to cost $40.

When he first speaks to the tire expert at the garage, he thinks it is going to cost him $105. Tire experts are the world's champion pessimists. They see nothing but grim faces and they are right. They are into technical explanation of why tires were no good in the first place as Noah Webster's more or less celebrated work on "Words I Have Met."

They tell you it can't possibly be fixed and if it is fixed it will cost in the neighborhood of $100.

Then when they have reduced you to the state of desolation and send you away thinking you haven't a friend in the world they go to work and fix your tire for $2.50.

The average blowout is expensive in that it includes the following:

Mental anguish $5,000.00
Loss of time 4.00
Fixing the tire 2.50
Total $5,006.50

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

SCIENTIFIC FARMING.
A body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm.

The great crops of last year were the results not only of a good season, but of the beginnings of scientific agriculture.

They were but the beginnings, however. We have yet a long way to go on that road before we reach the limits of possible attainment in the matter of crop yield.

Before we have gone very far in that direction there is every reason to believe that the bounteous yield of last year may be doubled or even trebled.

Already the boys' corn clubs of the south have shown something of what may be accomplished.

These lads were stimulated by the offer of prizes. They increased the yield per acre so amazingly as to astonish the old time farmers.

As a result of their example agriculture has been advanced throughout the south and this has affected not only corn, but other crops.

In Kentucky the average number of bushels of corn per acre was so much greater in 1912 than ever before that it caused comment throughout the nation and the credit was given to the boys' corn clubs.

Splendid work also is being done by the agricultural department at Washington, by the experiment stations, by the agricultural colleges and by the instructors that travel from county to county in many of the states.

In the last analysis, however, the work of improvement lies with the individual farmer. Others may tell him how, but he must make their ideas his own and do the work.

More careful selection of seed, study of soils, more thorough preparation of the ground, better seedling, more liberal and judicious use of fertilizers, crop rotation and more assiduous cultivation, all of these factors enter into the process.

In many sections mixed farming—that is, the raising of live stock as well as crops—will increase the farmer's profits.

In the past we have been, on the whole, woefully wasteful and lax. Now our resources are becoming exhausted, and we are paying the penalty.

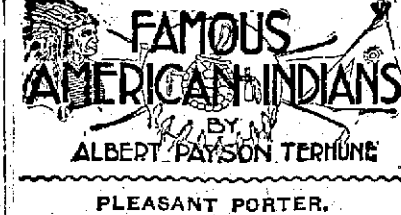

The time has come when the farmer must use business efficiency and scientific methods.

And he cannot take these from the theorist, but must himself put them in practice.

Value of Biblical Shekel.
The Biblical shekel of silver was worth about 50 cents on present day values. A shekel of gold represented about $10, a talent of silver was equivalent to $2,000, a talent of gold was nearly $30,000, a piece of silver, or a penny, was about eight and a half pence; a farthing was equal to one cent, a mite was still less than a farthing, and a gerah was three cents.

His Trade Mark.
"I wish you didn't have such a flat and pockmarked nose, papa," said the aristocratic young daughter of the plain old merchant. "That's the mark of the grindstone, my dear," replied the plodding old man.

War.
War is a hangover from the days when men ate their flesh hot from the kill and not from the fire—Will Livingston Comfort.

PLEASANT PORTER.

"He is the greatest living Indian!" So spoke the late President McKinley, concerning Pleasant Porter, chief of the Creek nation.

And, perhaps, the high praise was justified. Certainly in his sixty-six years Chief Porter managed to enact many a role that has never fallen to the lot of any other Indian. Here are a few of the many inconspicuous positions he held: Railroad president, Lieutenant in the Confederate army, Presbyterian elder, thirty-third degree Mason, Knight Templar and war chief of the Creeks.

An Indian in Central Park. Thousands of New Yorkers have seen Pleasant Porter. But few of them knew who he was. Up to 1900 people used often to turn for a second look at a tall, erect man, faultlessly dressed, who for hours at a time was wont to stride along the Central Park paths. He was elderly, but he had the figure and step of an athlete.

He was a "three-quarter blood" Indian, but he had the bearing and general aspect of a prosperous business man. There was a faint copper tinge to his face, and the cheekbones were a trifle more prominent than most white men's. But these qualities were scarcely noticeable.

Only his love of open-air and his dislike for the confinement of his hotel suite marked Porter as of savage race. Hence his long walks in the park, where for a time he could escape from the city's din and traffic.

Pleasant Porter was born in Indian Territory in the late 40's. His mother was the daughter of a Creek chief. His father was a half-breed Indian. As a lad Porter won fame for courage, marksmanship and rough riding. He quickly rose to the rank of chief. In the conflicts between his own tribe and its Indian neighbors he led his braves again and again to victory, and acquired a love for warfare.

It was this fondness for fighting that led him to enlist in the Confederate army during the Civil war. Many Indians have taken part in "white men's wars." But, except as scouts, etc., few have risen to any especial rank. Porter, however, fought his way up to a Lieutenantcy. After the war he carried his new military knowledge back to his people. From the martial maneuvers he taught them, as well as from the tactics he used when forced to take the field in overcoming tribal uprisings, he won the nickname of "General."

Not only through military genius but also by deep wisdom he made the Indians under his control look up to him with a reverence accorded to no other chief. And he used this great influence on the side of progress.

He early won the confidence of the government and thus managed to secure many concessions for the Creeks. Through sheer tact he kept his people on good terms with the territory's other tribes. Among the Indians he was a fellow native. In Washington, New York and other places in the East whether business or diplomatic errands often brought him, he was as the white men with whom he associated. He spoke perfect English, but once confessed:

"I do all my thinking in my own nation's dialect."

Porter sent his children and grandchildren to college, and taught his tribe to adopt the best customs of the whites. He was leader in local politics, and was once mentioned as candidate for the United States senate.

He stood high in the Presbyterian church, being an elder therein, and was once a delegate to the Presbyterian General Assembly. The climax of his "white man" career was reached when in 1906 he helped incorporate the Indian Central Railroad company and was elected first president of the road.

Secrets of His "Nation."
Concerning his people's ways Porter was always ready to talk up to a certain point. But all his veneer of civilization could not make him reveal the real secrets of the Indians. For instance, when an interviewer once begged him to explain the mysterious way in which news flashes with lightning speed from one tribe of Indians to another, in wilderness where there is no telegraph or telephone, Porter calmly evaded the question by saying:

"It may be telepathy. How does a fly, buzzing through the air, learn that an animal far away has been killed? Why are there thousands of flies flocking to the spot in less time than one can tell about it?"

Another interviewer asked him if it were true that Indians still wear paint and feathers.

"It is," replied Porter gravely. "They wear almost as much paint and feathers as do ladies on Fifth avenue."

The "Indian" plays he saw in New York used to disgust the old chief. He declared they were a libel on his race and that stage Indians would not be recognized by real savages.

A New Yorker, in 1905, trying to talk as he supposed Indians do, asked Porter if he had ever seen the "Great White Father at Washington." Porter looked puzzled a moment; then said: "Oh, you refer to my friend, President Roosevelt?"

Pleasant Porter died after a stroke of paralysis at his Indian Territory home on Sept. 3, 1907. He was mourned alike by thousands of Indians and white men.

THIN BLUE LINE OF VETERANS ASSEMBLE

ANSWER SOUND OF BUGLE AND GO TO THE CEMETERY TO PAY TRIBUTE TO DEPARTED COMRADES.

PROGRAM IS RENDERED

At the Myers Theatre This Afternoon
—Strong Address by Prof. Hooper Given.

When the war clouds of the great rebellion cleared away the soldier citizens returned to their homes and their former vocations, it was decreed by one of their great generals that once a year respect should be paid to the soldier dead, the men who failed to return to their homes with their comrades and those who later died and were laid to sleep in the last encampment of the living. In time this day became a national holiday and in every northern state graves are decorated by loving comrades and friends and even the boys in blue who lie buried in the Southland where they fell are remembered.

This morning the veterans of the Civil War of the Republic with their younger comrades, the soldiers of a second generation of another war, the Spanish-American struggle of 1898, went to the beautiful cemetery on the hills overlooking the city and with stings of mourning decorated the graves of departed soldiers.

The Moose band, resplendent in their new uniforms, led the line of march from the G. A. R. hall to the Grand Hotel corner, where carryalls and autos waited the veterans, while others journeyed on cars to the cemetery. Marching with them was the firing squad from the Harry L. Gifford camp of the United Spanish War Veterans under command of George Kueck, the camp commander. With them marched many of the members of the camp.

The members of the Woman's Relief Corps had charged the bands work and huge wagonloads of wreaths and bouquets had preceded them to the cemetery. Here tiny flags were placed on the graves of all soldiers and flowers distributed. The services were most impressive and hundreds of relatives of the departed were in attendance with their floral offerings to decorate the graves of their loved ones who had answered the last roll call.

At 1:30 the veterans again assembled at their hall and marched to the Myers theatre. The Moose band again furnished the musical inspiration and it was touching to see these heroes of bygone days march proudly erect to pay tribute to the departed. J. F. Carle, president of the day, presided, and the following program was rendered:

Musical—Orchestra Wisconsin School for the Blind.
Prayer—The Rev. T. D. Williams, pastor of the Cargill Methodist church.
Chorus—Double Male Quartette, Wisconsin School for the Blind.
Readings—John A. Logan's first general order for Memorial Day, and "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address," S. C. Buchanan.
Chorus—Pupils of Blind School.
Address—J. T. Hooper, Superintendent of School for the Blind.
Music—Orchestra.
Song—"The Grand Army Button," Miss Ruth Robertson.
Song—"America," by all, accompanied by orchestra.

Benediction—The Rev. T. D. Williams.
The members of the program committee are J. F. Carle, J. L. Bear, L. A. Fisher, R. R. Resig, J. W. London and T. D. Bidwell.
J. T. Hooper in his address to the veterans and their friends said: "We are assembled today on one of the great holidays of the year to commemorate the deeds, bravery and heroism of those who fought that the nation might live, and to draw from those deeds the lesson of true patriotic citizenship. We are here to honor those who fell in battle and those who died of disease and in prisons."

NOTED CHICAGO MAN VISITS JANESVILLE

George Landis Wilson Here Investigating Establishment of Proposed School.

George Landis Wilson, a Chicago manufacturer, is here in connection with the proposition to remove the School Service Association plant to Janesville. This is the company of which Robert F. Beardsley is president, and which now controls the system of manual training and vocational education developed by Prof. Beardsley and in use by several hundred schools, including a number in Wisconsin. Mr. Wilson has attained real prominence in the educational affairs of Illinois, particularly in the development of manual and vocational schools for that state.

FRIDAY TO BE ACCUSED OF OVEREATING WAS THE LAST STRAW.

Sport Shop
Shots
D. M. Coffey

The providence international league club is stacked with talent and good-luck emblems. If any importance is attached to their possession, Donohue's boys ought to slide right up in to top place.

It's a good thing there are plenty of leagues, else where would Dummy Taylor and Waddell and a temporary stopping place? The Dummy who was with the Giants many seasons, went from New York to the International league, thence to New Orleans and now he's with Topeka in the Western league.

Jack Miller, who was the brilliant luminary of the Pirates in 1909 after being secured from McKeesport, is again playing star ball with Pittsburgh. His work in the east was a feature.

The pitching Sitton brothers, Veder and Phil, are much more respectably of the Troy and Syracuse teams in the New York State league. They have requested their managers to save the embarrassment of twirling against each other.

Not content with getting three players from the Giants for Arthur Fromme, Joe Tinker has purchased Red Nelson from the Phillies for $100.

Jockey Carroll Schilling's application for a license has been turned down by the New York Jockey club. Schilling was one of the most famous riders when the game was killed in the east. He probably will ride in Europe.

Former Captain of the Washington Bobcats, has caught on as manager of a club in the Maine-New Brunswick league, which embraces cities near the Canadian frontier.

Since Chubby Charley Murphy announced that he liked the looks of Rube Schauer, Rube Waddell's entry, or was quoted as liking him, many clubs have been after the Superior (Wis.) pitcher. The Giants also want Schauer.

The Philadelphia National league club has been trying to win a pennant for thirty years without one being forthcoming.

Clark Griffith may sign Howard Moran, star pitcher of the Denver Western league, club before many days. Moran is highly recommended to the old fox.

Edgar Willett, who is pitching great ball for the Tigers, announces himself in the race for thinking up methods of shortening games. Edgar wants to know why wouldn't it be a good thing to make home-run hitters stop at first and count the run instead of having him consuming time in walking around the paths.

Ray Collins, the Boston Red Sox southpaw, is one of the most peculiar pitchers in the game, according to those who know him. At various periods in his career he looked as though he would make Rucker and Plank hit into the port-side honors. In 1909, when the Giants and Red Sox had a joke series, Collins won a shutout victory over Mathewson. In 1910 and 1911 Collins was just ordinary. Last season he hit the league on fire and in the world's series worked poorly.

The Walsh-Schalk battery seems to be one of the best teams Comiskey has had in many a day. Teams is right.

the marks in the various events will be displaced by better figures, and Pennsylvania, which won the championship last year, will have to fight hard to regain the title. Harvard, Cornell, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, and a host of the smaller Eastern colleges are represented by their star performers. Michigan has sent a team to the meet and the far West is represented for the first time by a team from the University of California. Several athletes of championship calibre are included among the Californians and the prediction is made that they will figure prominently in the fight for the titles.

AMATEUR ATHLETIC CHAMPIONSHIPS UP

Amateur Athletic Long Standing Records May be Broken at Inter-collegiate Meet Tomorrow.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Boston, Mass., May 29.—Hundreds of trained college athletes gathered in the Harvard stadium today for the preliminary events in the thirty-seventh annual track and field meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America. The survivors of today's contests will compete for the championships tomorrow.

Seldom in the history of the intercollegiate championships has there been such a wealth of runners, leapers and weight hurlers of high grade as are included in the entries this year. It seems almost certain that some of

CLASSIEST OUTFIELDING TRIO IN AMERICAN LEAGUE PRIMED TO BLAST WAY FOR RED SOX TO WIN ANOTHER CHAMPIONSHIP

The hard-hitting, fast-running, brilliantly-fielding outfield of the Boston Red Sox, world's champions, known as the best set of outer gardeners in baseball, is expected to cut some brilliant dividends in the American League this season. Whatever deficiencies there are in other sections of the team, and these faults are few, the outfield, Speaker, Lewis and Hooper, should go far toward balancing. All three are still in their prime as ballplayers, and should advance rather than recede in ability and value to the team.

SPEED MANIACS AT THE COLUMBUS TRACK

HIGH SCHOOL NINE FINISHES SEASON

Baseball Team Furnishes Games Closing the Most Successful Athletic Year in School's History.

Because Coach Curtis was unable to arrange a game for the coming Saturday, the athletic activities at the Janesville high school have closed after the most successful year in the school's history. Only in baseball did the high school athletes fail to show championship ability and with more practice the players were confident that they could easily defeat the two teams that gained victories over them.

The players were anxious for Mr. Curtis to arrange for at least one more game so as to enable them to win their letters. It being necessary for a team to win three-fifths of their games before the letter can be awarded. The members of this year's nine are deeply disappointed with the outcome of the games as it was thought that with the good material that the school had Janesville would make another showing toward annexing another state championship. The high have, broke even in the percentage column, defeating Belmont high school two straight games with ease but losing to St. John's Military Academy and to Palmyra high school. With better luck both of these games should have been victories as Council had the opposing players at his mercy only to lose the game because his teammates failed to support him in the pinches.

The shining light of this year's nine has been the pitching of Andy Connel, who has pitched excellent ball in every game, pitching two four hit games and let down the St. John cadets with two scratch singles. The Janesville infield was far stronger than any team that they met but had a sorrowful habit of blowing away chances at the critical stages of the games. The outfield was weak but was strengthened greatly towards the latter part of the season. The entire team was weak in batting, only two men on the team could be relied upon to hit the ball when hits were needed to score. With more practice and coaching by Prof. Curtis, the team would undoubtedly be able to finish the season with a better percentage.

Writing to Andy.

"I always feel after I have spent an hour or two in your company," he said "that I am a better man." "It is very good of you to say so," she replied. "Don't hesitate to come often," Chicago Record-Herald.

A Dependable God

By REV. J. H. RALSTON,
Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Meady Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT: "There failed not ought of any good thing which the Lord had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass."—Joshua 21:45.

When man is in his sinner's moments, he longs for that which is stable, for sincerity. He longs for the time when a man's word will be as good as his bond, when Regulus will willingly go back to Carthage simply because he said he would. About almost anything that a man meets in his every day experiences prompts him to ask, "Is it trustworthy, dependable?" If a man buys a fountain pen, he asks, "Will it write all the time?" As the aeronaut looks at his biplane or monoplane, and thinks of being 5,000 feet above the earth, he asks, "Is it dependable?" If a man has a bit of money and wishes to lay it aside for a rainy day, he asks of the bank in which he thinks of depositing it, "Is it safe?" President-elect Wilson recently said: "However the variation may come, no matter what the ephemeral feature may be, no matter what the external form may be, men are looking for a foothold; they are looking for some firm ground of faith upon which to walk."

Is it possible that man can ask with reference to God, "Is he dependable?" The gods of the Egyptians, Greeks or Romans were super-mundane beings, and man was constantly asking the question: "Will the gods change?" We have a proverb that has come down the centuries, "As fickle as the gods." The ancient religious devotee would think of his gods as mercurial, changeable beings, moved by any wind that blew—he could never trust them.

If we take the gods of today, and they are not the less gods than in the days of old—money, place, appetite—men are bowing down to these and worshipping them, and they may well ask, "Are they dependable?" So the subject of a dependable God is immensely practical, and those who worship the God of the Bible claim that he is dependable. He is the same yesterday, today and forever, whether manifesting himself as Father, Son or Holy Spirit.

The Bible is full of claims of the faithfulness of God, and God may be placed in sharp contrast to the gods that are in opposition or rivalry. The true God never breaks a promise, as the text so clearly claims. There may be some support to the idea of the dependability of God, as there is a demand for this in God; just as we claim that there is a God because there is a demand for God. And again the regularity and uniformity of movement of the various parts of God's creation is proof of the regularity and uniformity in the Creator himself. We know that the rising of the sun can be depended on; seasons of the year never fail to alternate; the systems that swing in illimitable space are so exact in their movements that those movements can be calculated for millenniums in advance to minutes and seconds—and God created all of these, and he is as dependable as they.

God has given us many "great and precious promises"—of blessings material, blessings to the body politic, blessings to the intellectual and esthetic nature, and to the spiritual in man, both with respect to the experiences of this life, and the eternity that stretches beyond.

The challenge of God as to his faithfulness invites the closest examination of his character for veracity, consequently for dependability. His promises have been most specific; in many cases given to individuals; dates, locations and circumstances being definitely proclaimed hundreds of years before the things promised were realized. Joshua was justified in his strong assertion as he reviewed God's personal relationship to himself, for at the beginning of his career (Josh. 1:5) God had given specific promises, and they had been fulfilled literally.

This dependability of God is comprehensive. It means something beyond his promises of blessings, and applies as well to the warnings and threatenings of his word. In the history of Israel the "threatenings" because of disobedience were as numerous, if not more so, than the promises of blessings, because of obedience. God being just as dependable as to the carrying out of the one as of the other, if God is proclaimed as faithful God (Deut. 7:9) with respect to keeping covenant and showing mercy to a thousand generations, it is shown in the next verse that it is the same God that "repays those who hate him face to face."

"God will not change—the restless years may bring—
Sunlight and shade—glories of the spring,
In silent gloom and sunless winter hours;
Joy mixed with grief—sharp thorns with fragrant flowers.
Earth-lights may shine awhile, and then grow dim,
But God is true; there is no change in him."

Clean wiping rags, free from hooks and buttons will bring 34c per pound. The children can earn money by bringing them to the Gazette office.

UNDERWOOD TARIFF BILL TO HAVE HARD SLEDDING IN SENATE; REPUBLICANS HOPE TO GET SUGAR AND WOOL DEMOCRATS' HELP

The Underwood tariff bill isn't enjoying the same easy sledding through the senate which characterized its triumphant course through the house. In the lower chamber it was known that opposition would be fruitless.

In the upper house standpat and progressive Republicans stand together in their opposition to the administration's bill. Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin are working shoulder to shoulder. An effort is being made to enlist the support of Democratic senators from sugar and wool states in the fight against the Underwood bill. Senator Thornton of Louisiana is said to be opposed to the bill on account of the sugar schedule.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, chairman of the senate finance committee, is in charge of the Underwood bill in the upper house.

DEDICATE MEMORIAL TO ARCHIBALD BUTT

Twelve Foot Latin Cross of Granite Unveiled in Arlington National Cemetery—Selected Site.

Washington, D. C., May 30.—A monument to Major Archibald W. Butt, military aid to President Roosevelt and Taff, and who was lost in the Titanic disaster on April 15, 1912, was unveiled with impressive exercises today in the Arlington National Cemetery. The monument consists of a 12-foot granite, Latin cross, and was erected by Major Butt's brothers. A portion of the inscription says: "A devoted son and brother, an efficient officer, a loyal friend who in death as in life, served faithfully God and Humanity." The monument stands on a hill selected by Major Butt himself in 1908, while he held the office of depot quartermaster in Washington and had charge of the cemetery. The location is near old Fort McPherson and a short distance from the Miles mausoleum.

William S. Lord, wealthy poet and department store owner of Evanston, Ill., must answer to a suit for divorce on the unpoetic charges of infidelity and desertion. The Lords are prominent in Evanston, having lived there since 1884. Mrs. Lord says her husband deserted her about February 1 and that since then he has been unfaithful to her at various times and places.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them with the New Prescription.

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a prescription ointment—double strength—which is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by Badger Drug Co. under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of ointment and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength ointment; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

that the principles of free government might be saved to the world.
We are here to pay a like tribute to those who have since answered the last command and passed on to join their comrades who preceded them to the other field, where here also express our appreciation to those more hardy ones who still survive and yet who faced the same dangers and exhibited the same bravery.
Nor must we forget on these occasions the mothers, sisters and sweethearts who made just as great sacrifices and whose bravery, devotion and love of country was such an inspiration to those whom they sent forth to set down the rebellion to uphold the flag and to establish the principles of freedom upon which the nation had been founded.
We who were born after the great struggle had ended cannot fully appreciate the sacrifices, the bravery and the hardships of that awful conflict. We can only read in history and hear from those who survive the stories and personal reminiscences of that four years' struggle. Yet no true American citizen can learn of Shiloh, Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Lookout Mountain, the campaign in Virginia, the march from Atlanta to the sea, the siege of Bunker Hill and the story of Valley Forge and the campaign of New Jersey, when we recall the campaign in the south and the struggle and sacrifice of our forefathers during the revolution, those who think at all realize the cost of the building of this nation. But great as the sacrifices of our forefathers, awful as were the sufferings at that time, they sink into insignificance when compared with the sacrifice of men on both sides during that great conflict of the Civil War.
The United States, supposedly a nation with a very small standing army, and we are told by those of extreme militant tendencies, unprepared for an attack that occurred, these United States, in times of peace are spending more than two-thirds of the entire national income in preparation for future wars or for obligations incurred in past wars.
We have established and maintain an average of five new normal schools for each of the states, each school having an annual income of one hundred thousand dollars.
To establish and maintain an average of thirty new agricultural schools for each of the states, each school having an annual income of fifteen thousand dollars.
To add one million dollars annually to the common school fund of each of the states.
To purchase text books for all pupils in all of the schools, public and private, in all of the states of the Union.
To give to each of the states of the Union annually a quarter of a million dollars for bibles.
Can we afford to have war in any form at such a cost? And as we are assembled today to commemorate the deeds of those who made such sacrifices ought we not to dedicate ourselves to the task of doing everything we can to develop a patriotism of peace, a patriotism which builds up our nation, not at the expense of the lives and sufferings of our brothers, but a patriotism which is founded upon brotherly love and true service to all.
I said a little while ago that those who studied truly the events of the war and who appreciated the underlying friendship between the two armies could not fail to wonder why this conflict was necessary. Yet it was unavoidable, and as much as we owe to our forefathers, that great conflict resulted in the failure of the framers of the constitution to meet squarely and bravely and settle in a peaceful, intelligent, Christian way, the questions of state rights and universal freedom of mankind.
And today as we are attempting to draw from this struggle the lessons of true patriotism, the question naturally arises: Are we of this generation facing bravely, honestly and intelligently the great questions which confront us at this time. How are we meeting the great industrial, economic and social problem which modern inventions and modern modes of life have brought about? Times of war are times which develop and bring prominently to the fore all the bravery, heroism and patriotism of which our hearts are capable, but frequent times of peace require just as much bravery, just as much heroism and just as much patriotism. I admire the man, though he differs absolutely with me in judgment, who is using his best efforts to rightly solve the great questions which are now before us. Frequently the man, whom time and circumstances afterwards prove wrong, was just as patriotic, just as honest, and often more courageous than those who worked on the opposite side.

The lesson we should draw from the patriots whose memory we honor today is a lesson of the same kind of bravery to meet and solve the problems now before us which was required during the days of the Civil War. And the men who would be abhorred and branded as traitors are the men who, on the one hand, attempt to use the affairs of the government to develop their own selfish ends at the expense of their fellow men and those who, on the other hand, make use of the passions and prejudices of the ignorant for their own ambition and political aggrandizement. We have before us the great questions of social vice, and the white slave traffic. We have the questions of a just and equitable division of the profits of labor. We must solve in some way the great question of conservation of resources and of men. We must work out some plan by which we can better amalgamate or prohibit the great influx of foreign immigrants. We must in some way, solve the difficulties which have brought about the corrupt, incompetent and extravagant systems of municipal governments. We must meet bravely, honestly and patriotically the questions of clean government and law enforcement.
It requires bravery to take the stand for the right on all these questions. It requires personal sacrifices both in time and property, to do one's duty with such questions to be solved. It requires true patriotism to speak courageously and act honorably for the welfare of the home people, and it is because of these that we should draw from Memorial Day a lesson in patriotism which will teach us to do our duty towards making an example to the world a government of the people, by the people and for all the people, a government which exemplifies that which the great Master came into the world to teach the brotherhood of man and universal peace.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

TWO young girls stood on the sidewalk outside my window this morning talking earnestly with each other. Almost every one of the people who were passing on their way to work threw interested glances at one of the girls; the other was scarcely noticed.

Why was it? Because of several of the tiniest reasons possible to imagine; namely, the first girl's eyelashes were perhaps an eighth of an inch longer than the second girl's; her hair was about a quarter of an inch shorter; her lips a trifle fuller; her cheeks a wee bit pinker; her hair a trifle lustrous of straight.

In short, one girl was very pretty, the other was homely.

It didn't take an instant to realize that. And yet when I stopped to think about the matter, and analyze it there were only the infinitesimal differences which I have named to separate the two faces so widely.

What tiny, tiny differences and yet what a very different world these two girls will live in because of them. Everywhere people will look at one of these two girls and ignore the other. The one will always be admired, courted and praised without any effort on her part whenever she shows her face. The other will have to laboriously earn whatever admiration and praise she receives by her character or her brains.

The one will find all doors quick to open to her because she is the exquisite thing we all enjoy a pretty girl. The other will have to open her own door because she is that commonplace thing we are all inclined to ignore—a homely girl.

The beauty will be continually exposed to all sorts of objectionable attentions to welcome admiration, and possibly to temptations; the other will have none of these advantages. The danger of neglecting everything but her beauty; the homely girl will be forced to cultivate her wit and her good disposition because they are her only tools with which to work for love.

And all this difference in their lives just because of an eighth of an inch of eyelash, a quarter of an inch of nose and a few other differences just as tiny.

Isn't it really remarkable when you stop to think about it? If beauty were a matter of some tremendous facial difference it wouldn't seem quite so strange.

And what a queer thing, this quality we call beauty is anyhow. Why should a certain length of nose and a certain color of hair please us so much? If you had to tell why in a court of law you never could. And yet you know it is so.

After all beauty is a very queer, senseless, unreasonable thing, isn't it? And yet, queer and senseless and unreasonable as it is, I think Diogenes would have a harder time than he did if he were to hunt for a plain woman who wouldn't give almost anything on earth to be beautiful.

and one teaspoonful of flour. Turn this into a crust and pour over it the following mixture: One cup of milk, the beaten yolk of three eggs, one-half cupful of sugar and two teaspoons of lemon juice. Beat this thoroughly. Cook in moderate oven until custard is firm. Remove from oven, and when cool cover meringue made with the white of the three eggs. Beat to stiff froth and three table-spoonfuls of sugar. Brown in a slow oven.

Rose Rhabarb—Cut in small pieces with the skin, on add two cups of sugar to each quart used; and then the baking with for fifteen minutes. Four enough to make a soft dough. Roll out, cut and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Bake in a quick oven. Devil's Food Cake—Cream one-half cup of butter with one and one-half cups brown sugar, add two beaten eggs, one-half cup of sour milk, in which a teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved, two cups sifted flour, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Have two squares of chocolate, grated, stir in eggs, chocolate, and sugar. When the mixture is smooth stir in the cake batter and bake in two layers. Put together with white frosting.

Sugar Cookies—One cup of butter, two cups sugar, cream them together. Beat yolks and whites of two eggs separately. Add two teaspoons baking powder, flavoring to taste, and Roll out, cut and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Bake in a quick oven. SOME EATINGS, NEW AND FINE.

Crisp the dried beef in a little butter before adding it to the white sauce for frizzled beef. It tastes better and is a change from the ordinary way of serving it.

Appelstrudel—Put a cup of flour into a small bowl, make a hollow in the flour, add a tablespoonful of melted butter, a dash of salt and an egg, well beaten, mix and place over the teakettle or in a double boiler, covering the bowl when hot, roll out on a clean cloth and stretch it until it is as thin as tissue paper. Cut apples in thin slices, or peaches are also delicious, add seeded raisins, three gingersnaps, crumbled, sugar and a few chopped almonds. Strew this on the dough, adding butter generously, lay in a pan, fold over and bake a good brown. Sprinkle with powdered sugar after taking from the oven.

Raisin Cookies—Cream a cup of butter, add two cups of sugar and two well beaten eggs, two cups of steamed and chopped raisins, two tablespoonfuls of sour cream, one tablespoonful of grated nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls of soda and flour enough to make a soft dough. Roll out and bake in a moderate oven, watching carefully, as they burn easily.

Fruit Roll—This may be used as a confection, but is delicious served with whipped cream as an emergency dessert. Take two pounds, each of dates, raisins and nuts, a half pound of figs, put all through the meat grinder and roll in powdered sugar. Wrap in waxed paper and keep just as one does fruit cake.

Cherry Cake—Cream a half cup of butter, add a cup of sugar, three well beaten eggs, three tablespoonfuls of cream, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves, one and a half cups of flour, a teaspoonful of soda. Mix well and add a cup of canned cherries, juice and all.

Every Day Talks For Every Day People

How many of the Gazette readers are going to have a vacation this summer? And how many mothers are planning for it now, finishing up bits of sewing so that when the time comes they will be rested and ready?

Three weeks more of school and then the woods, pastures and streams for the wee ones. Do you know always feel so for the children along the last of the year? They have so many little things to do to finish up the year's work.

I think we mothers should be especially patient with our children from now until the end of the school year. Going to school isn't all play, not by any means, and a boy or girl should be given hearty home support and cooperation.

When school is out we may relax a bit, for no child that is well and strong needs very much inducement to play. A load of sand, a few tin cans, a couple of spades and shovels under a shady tree will keep the average family of "wee ones" happy and content for hours at a time.

A tent is another first aid to keep children at home. Why, one tent can serve many purposes that the mother ever imagined where there's "wee ones". In the land of "make believe" it's a gospel tent, chalet, summer house, store, restaurant, army headquarters and the hiding place of a wicked band of Indians. It goes without saying that mother is always given a part in the wonderful happenings in her own back yard. Often the child is called out to try and lose the youthful band sign a treaty of peace.

One night last summer a wee boy, who shall be nameless, decided he would be a real Indian. He would stay out all night in his tent—alone. His parents had their own idea on how long he would stay by his campfire, after dark, and he was to be put to experiment is to learn, so they kept silent and let Hiawatha, Jr., make all his preparations. He went to his tent, his sisters went to their room, they did not see him, and mother sat on the porch to rest a bit after the toil of the day.

Soon—very soon—Hiawatha, Jr., came around the end of the porch, and in his Dad's lap and heaved a long, long sigh.

"What's the matter son," said Daddy. "Don't you like staying out in the tent alone at night? Oh, it's not that," said the thoughtful child. "I'm thinking about the girls upstairs alone. I'm afraid they'll be lonesome, I guess I'll go up to my room."

With the facilities for camping and boating that Janesville has, the expense of a vacation is greatly lessened, for if one cannot go on a trip they can camp near enough to town to allow John to go to his daily work, and then the girls can have a week free from work would be a good plan. He needs it! Think how steady he has worked all the year. Plan your work and income so John can have his vacation. That's your partner, it isn't at all fair that he should never have a day of his own. Plan now that he will. You can have it come to pass and decide now that though you may not have many happy days (this one will force ahead of them all).

Fads and Fashions

New York, May 31.—It was to be expected that the Japanese influence in the coming into fashion of the noble skirt things have gone from bad to worse and now the point has been reached when an exhibition of the latest models by the noted fashion designer, who is now in the city, will be a centric reminder of nothing so much as of an exhibition of Cubist "art".

One of the latest freak notions is the adoption of the Japanese silhouette as interpreted by the western originalators of fashions. Only a short time ago one of the best known importers displayed a model which was so completely Japanese that it caused those who saw it to exclaim, "That's a good costume was in the new fashions, which is quite unlike the old material. One occasionally sees on the street a woman wearing a dress of changeable color of the kind that was popular a few seasons ago, and that is a very brilliant of surface, while the new weaves of the fabric have a curious filmy sheen, almost like the soft flimsy organza.

The Japanese model referred to was in light green tulle. It had a set-on hem of the same material and the regular "obi" or broad sash which the Japanese woman wears around her waist and then the material was cut from the back of the neck quite stiffly. The only trimming was embroidered of green and silvery gray floss given in a Japanese arrangement of squares in a diamond pattern. The costume was another of the extremes that are constantly submitted to public inspection. But fashion designers only too often intentionally make the thing that is new and different shall be the thing that is old. They know that the winds of popular prejudice and the resistance of the average feminine conservatism will make these exaggerated fashions last and even a little longer.

It is safe to predict that in the matter of the new figure, comparatively few women will go to an ugly extreme. Of course, there are always a few who are vulgar in their tastes and aged in their notions, and who will make the thing that is new and different shall be the thing that is old. They know that the winds of popular prejudice and the resistance of the average feminine conservatism will make these exaggerated fashions last and even a little longer.

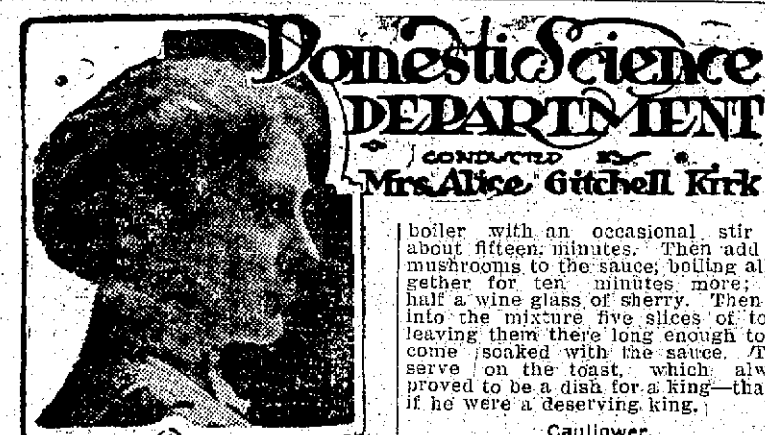

New girdles and sashes appear as by magic every few days, and some of them are fearful and wonderful. Indeed, others will be unobjectionable if they are discreetly covered by a wrap with white and cream summer frocks. Of these are the new ponce sashes in Cubist designs and colors. They come from ten to eighteen inches in width and look more like crepe than ponce. The ends are gathered in tassels made of the colors shown in the printed patterns.

Shoes and hosiery become more and more striking and such variety and novelty were never born in colored heels. On the contrary, when it is a component part of the color scheme of a costume, it forms an attractive note. The combination of different fabrics with leather in some of the latest designs also produced many really good and attractive effects—as well as many extremely bad ones.

Novelties in hosiery are to be adopted with much more caution than those in shoes. This season the colored heels are not to be worn together when the "novelty" is in the least conspicuous. If the shoes are plain, one may permit one's self a departure from the absolutely plain silk stockings, although most women of good taste will confine themselves to the changeable effects, to woven stripes in a plain color, or at most to the lace stripe when worn with a long and a long.

Most of the stamped patterns for embroidered waists presuppose a black closing, and most of the waists this year are made with a front closing. The problem which confronts the woman who buys two or three of these shirt patterns for pick-up embroidery in the warm weather is how to make a front closing right through the center of the embroidered design. Sometimes the pattern is so open and loose that it will not be difficult to cut the waist from top to bottom either in the center front or else on the left side for a closing there. Many of the prettiest patterns run either straight up and down or diagonally from shoulder to waist.

An applied hem of the material of the waist can be put on for the button holes and flaps or underlap can be made for the button holes. It can be in the form of a narrow, stitched pleat. An applied hem can be made of contrasting material. If the waist is stamped and embroidered on white voile, a narrow strip of figured voile can be used for the hem, or long turnovers on collar and cuffs, if long sleeves and high collar are used, or flounces about the flat turnback collar.

Domestic Science DEPARTMENT

CONDUCTED BY Mrs. Alice Mitchell Kirk

There is no use repeating all we have said about French cooking. It is good. All who have ever had a chance to try it know that this is true. More than that, they know their work is an art and no one could convince them (or really want to) that it is not.

In France cooking is taught in the home. In fact, every French girl knows how to cook and sew beautifully. Last summer, when going to the country, an hour's ride from Paris, my friend, who traveled with me said:

"I am going to take some material for waists with me, as we will surely find some French girls who can sew, in fact, all French girls sew well."

She took the material, and sure enough, there was a beautiful French girl whose father had recently and business reverses and she could not make her own living. She had opened a little shop for making blouses, or waists, as we call them, for sewing was exquisite, her cooking was wonderful and she could remain with Madame C., where we were studying, French and been one of her most successful teachers.

For American girls are learning to cook, if not taught at home by mother, they are getting the art in cooking schools and are able to bring into the home many new and interesting dishes. We too, want to put into the real French art economy and respect which they put into their most delicious cookery.

Mushrooms on Toast: Pare the stems and underparts of about one and a half pounds of mushrooms and wash them in water to which has been added a few drops of vinegar. Do not let them lie in the water, but immediately boil them in several pieces of parsley (not put up) for about twenty-five minutes until tender. While they are cooking put into a saucepan a piece of butter the size of a large egg (always use the best butter) and throw in a large tablespoonful of flour all at once. Stir with a wooden spoon and about one-third of a cup of hot water in which the mushrooms are boiling. Never waste the precious essence of flavor. Stir again and add salt, pepper and about half a cup of veal or other gravy left from the day before. Cook this sauce in a double and at the ends of the sleeves. Ruffing suggests itself as a form of covering for the meeting place of the shoulders when the pattern is made neatly cut and must simply be slashed regardless of matching leaves and flowers and stems or circles. Quarters and twirls fastened under a narrow box pleat opening and turning away from it ruffling of any width can be used. If it is used on the front of the waist it forms also a good finish for the sleeves.

There is a difficulty in making long sleeves which look really well. Those made by the best dressmakers are often somewhat baggy about the wrists, so the home seamstress needs to make hers wrinkleless. They can be made in a trill or end in a little shirred ruffle which is cut with the boiler with an occasional stir for about fifteen minutes. Then add the mushrooms to the sauce, boiling all together for ten minutes more; add half a wine glass of sherry. Then put into the mixture five slices of toast, leaving them there long enough to become soaked with the sauce. Then serve on the toast, which always proved to be a dish for a king—that is, if he were a deserving king.

Cauliflower. Some people cannot digest cauliflower—chou-fleur, or cabbage flower as the French call it. How many young housewives know that there is a tough outer skin over the stems of the little clusters of which the cauliflower is composed, and that if this is removed it is no more difficult of digestion than any other vegetable? This is the way:

Separate the "flower" into all its tiny clusters. With a small sharp knife cut and pull off the thick skin of the stems and under parts. Then put them to boiling water and cook until tender. When done pour off the water and add salt and a few spoonfuls of left-over meat gravy, stirring all together over the fire until steaming hot.

The clusters lose their form and when served it is a total different appearance from the pretty but uninteresting whole cauliflower with white or drawn butter sauce, with familiar and most gratefully added. It is totally different in taste as well. Grated cheese added to this for a change gives an excellent flavor.

Ragout. There is no more economical dish for a well-fed family than a good ragout. It is as savory and nourishing as a dish as any one could desire. Use about two pounds of the shoulder of veal and cook for twenty minutes or so in a small iron pot with salt, pepper and butter, until well browned. Turn it over from time to time and add a small wine glass of water to prevent burning.

Be very chary of spilling good things by water dilution, and in an iron pot there is little danger of burning. Then sprinkle and stir in well two teaspoonfuls of flour that is sprinkled over the meat and turn the meat over and over; then add eight large carrots cut into small dice, four onion sliced, several pieces of parsley, about two cups of raw peas and a cupful of water. Cook it tightly covered an hour and a half, adding a half-hour before it is done, a plateful of small potatoes, cut in half. Of course, other meats can be used, and left-over vegetables of any sort, but what makes it good is the way it is done. The French are very fond of dishes of meats and vegetables cooked together, which are both wholesome and economical.

Most of the new waists are made with a suggestion of color about them. This color can be introduced with small glass or china buttons used as trimming, as well as for the closing. They can be applied to the cuffs in a row from the top to bottom and at the corners of the flat collar.

As to belts, it is a good policy not to attach the belt permanently, for fashions in regard to belts and the waisting change very frequently and it is much easier to adjust matters if the belt is not permanently fastened.

Baking Helps

Valuable Suggestions By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, Exponent of the Art of Baking, as taught by Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Helpful Cake Making Hint.

Always sift flour and K.C. Baking Powder at least three times. The more sifting, the lighter the cake. Remember that! To cream butter and sugar quickly, warm the sugar slightly. Beat yolks of eggs with rotary beater. Whip whites of eggs with flat spoon whip. Water makes lighter cakes; milk makes richer cakes.

To mix a cake, first cream butter and sugar thoroughly, then add yolks, if used. Then alternately add moisture and flour that has been sifted with baking powder and stir until smooth and glossy, adding egg whites after thoroughly mixing.

Always use K.C. Baking Powder.

Always sift flour and K.C. Baking Powder at least three times. Have shortening cold and firm. Mix dough as soft as it can be handled. The softer dough goes into the oven, the lighter the biscuit when it comes out. It is easier for K.C. Baking Powder to do its work in soft than in stiff dough. Mix biscuits very little. Do not knead. Stir up with spoon or knife and press in shape to roll on floured board.

With K.C. Baking Powder results are sure and certain. Ask your grocer for K.C.

Women Ahead.

As women, we should not quarrel with our horizon, nor should we showishly arraign poor man because he has civilized us at his expense. We must realize simply that emotionally we are centuries ahead of him; and that we shall have to wait patiently for him to grow on our same time-line, moderate our steps to his just as we do when we take the baby out for an airing.—Woman's Life.

Queer Reason for Divorce. Woman wants to divorce her husband because he suffers. Most married men don't even get a chance to do that.—New York Herald.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will you please tell me how to make my neck white? It is very yellow. (2) What will remove blackheads? (3) Are opera cloaks being worn? (4) When? (5) Will large hats be worn this summer? (6) Will pleated skirts be worn?

THANK YOU. I don't expect any girl better than my mother. And I tire of any man who is not here only a short time, and I want to leave now. Can you from the sort of girl who will be just as much to you at the end of every month as she is at the first? There are a great many good girls in this world—most of them are good. Because you have found some with faults is no sign that all girls are alike. For one simply don't put their selves in your way and you will find them too modest to make any advances to a man—especially a man who is a lover and he stays in one place long enough to get really acquainted. Wherever you go you will find places and people much alike. Better make up your mind to look for happy pretty things near at hand, instead of thinking that things must be nicer some other place. Force your self to stay in one place long enough to really get acquainted with the best things and the best people there and you won't be so anxious to leave.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How does a fellow feel when he feels all feeling die? And twenty years ago we have met and been with a thousand girls. I have met them all over the globe. I have never seen a girl that I could really love. I love to go with them. But a thousand times I don't care a fig for a fellow who has no desire of my life is to have a good girl and a nice little home. I make good money, go in the best society. I have come nearest loving a girl in a department store. Where would you advise a fellow to look for a nice, good sweet girl? I am considered a nice looking young man. I have never been refused of an engagement with any girl. It is not that I expect too much of a girl, but

GOLD DUST Cleans Millions of Plates Every Day

EVERY time we eat, the dishes have to be washed—that means three times a day for 365 days—or 1095 times a year. That means work, hard work, and lots of it—if done in the old-fashioned soap-and-water way.

Why not do it the Gold Dust way and save half the time? A little Gold Dust sprinkled in your dishwater will do the work in half the time and make your dishes brighter, sweeter, cleaner than they can be made by any other method.

Any housewife who isn't using Gold Dust for washing dishes is making twice as much work of dishwashing as she need to.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

Use Gold Dust for washing clothes and dishes, scrubbing floors, cleaning woodwork, oilcloth, silverware and tinware, polishing brasswork, cleaning bathroom pipes, refrigerators, etc., softening hard water and making the finest soft soap.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS

On the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Linscott For the International Press Bible Question Club.

June 1, 1913. Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.

Joseph Tests His Brethren. Gen. xlv.

Golden Text—Confess therefore your sins one to another, and pray one for another that ye may be healed. Jas. v.16.

(1) Verses 1-11—What was the motive of Joseph in acting in this apparently cruel and deceptive way?

(2) Is it or not, why, sometimes necessary for a kind heart to act the part of apparent cruelty to accomplish good ends?

(3) Why does God frequently allow or cause things of a very severe nature, to happen to the best of people?

(4) Joseph acted in a way to deceive and instructed his steward to falsely accuse his brethren. Would you or not, say that he did perfectly right? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(5) If we do a cruel or wicked thing, such as these men did in selling their brother Joseph into Egypt, what reason is there to believe that we are sure to meet with more than an equivalent in suffering in after life?

(6) Suppose for a moment that this story is only a parable showing the cause and effect of sin, then how can you show that it is true to actual life?

(7) How can you demonstrate it to be a fact that circumstances conspire to haunt with trouble, a man with a guilty conscience?

(8) Verses 12-17—Benjamin had no part in selling Joseph. How do you account for the fact that God often permits the innocent to suffer as well as the guilty?

(9) When we are accused of a thing of which we are innocent, with no way to prove it, and circumstances are against us, what is the best way for us to act?

(10) What was Joseph's dream as a boy, and how were these events fulfilling that dream?

(11) Verses 18-26—What excellent qualities do you find in this speech of Judah, that are worthy of the imitation of public speakers?

(12) Which affects a man most when we want to appease his anger, or ask a favor, an appeal to his feelings or emotions, or an appeal to his reason?

(13) If you can stir a person's sympathy, how much more likely are you to persuade him to grant you a favor or to do you justice?

(14) If how many times did Joseph's method test his brethren?

(15) What was the one who proposed the selling of Joseph into Egypt, and what was the result of that plan?

(16) If a man through jealousy or other strong feeling does a bad thing, and years afterward regrets it, and does all he can to make reparation, would he be inclined to increase much confidence in him as if he had never done the bad deed? Give your reasons.

(17) Verses 27-34—Who was the mother of Joseph and Benjamin and what peculiar circumstances were there before or at their birth which would tend to make their father love them very tenderly?

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE CHIN.

By Howard L. Rann.

The chin is a small, dimpled bump which is used in conversation more than any other agent except the tongue. A person who is equipped with a rotary chin and a swivel tongue doesn't need anything else in order to become a star conversationalist.

The chin is hung immediately below the tongue, which uses it to gesture with. When the tongue becomes excited it is sure of a sympathetic response from the chin, which wobbles violently up and down and in and out, and in a twinkling of an eye the human countenance. A person is said to be chinning when he talks entirely with that member, rather than go higher up and bring down an original remark or two.

Most people are provided with only one chin, which does not seem to interfere with their conversation, however. Others are more generously favored by nature and have a bas relief edition yelped the double chin. The double chin is a sign of a jovial disposition and an unimpaired appetite. It is getting so that women who want to engage household servants always give the preference to a double-chinned cook, as the family can sleep until nine o'clock in the morning without starting any fireworks in the kitchen, if more people would cultivate double chins, there would be fewer grouches served along with the breakfast food.

A popular type of chin is the receding variety, which is supposed to indicate indecision of character. Some times it does and sometimes it is backed by an iron will and a right arm like a mile driver.

The sharp, razor-edged chin, which runs out to a peak is often sung by the poet, who declares that it is invariably worn by the pessimist and the despondent. It all depends. We have seen some angular, three-cornered chins whose owners bought more pancake flour and knickerbocker pants for the poor in one year than a dozen chubby-faced professors of religion. You can no more judge the disposition of a man by his chin than you can tell the age of a hen by her teeth.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher

Beneath the ancient roof of Yale he meets the students raw, and, for a small amount of cake, expounds the common law. No symptoms does he show of being a poet, but his words hide the words of the familiar man. He talks of Blackstone, and repeat, of old man Gode talks of, and looks up, greater in defeat than in his victory. To good service, his wisdom, his high estate or low, a better aim than that, odds fish, no citizen could know. And he'll send from across Yale good law, for the professors, and the same for the professors, and the same for the professors. And when the study hours are gone, he does not brood at all, but moves forth to the lawn to see the boys play. He has no secret sorrow in his heart, no secret sorrow in his heart, no secret sorrow in his heart. At chest, no sackcloth in his hand, he only hopes to do his best wherever he may land. And some there are who talk in gloom, when they have left the act, they talk of traitors, treachery, and until they strain their backs. But old Bill Taft does none of this, nor does he whine or scold, he wears a smile that speaks of bliss, the smile that won't come off, and so, as he pounds Wells on Liens, and Little on Hay, he eats his modest meal of greens, and saves ten cents a day.

FLORENCE HOLBROOK BEGINS FOURTH SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Florence H. F. Lean, known on the stage as Florence Holbrook, an actress of national fame who has appeared at the Myres theatre on several occasions, has started divorce proceedings for the fourth time against her husband, Cecil W. S. Lean, in the New York courts.

This action was instituted because Mrs. Lean failed to prove her case in the other cases, the first of which was brought a little over a year ago. The initial suit was a great surprise to the theatrical world, for the reason that the pair had been known as the "dovey Leans," since they were married, Sept. 21, 1902.

Mr. and Mrs. Lean became estranged in Kansas City in 1911 and it was shortly after this that the wife asked the courts to free her. The suit followed in rapid succession, the last being brought on April 7 last.

Qualities That Bring Success. Success in life is not due to luck; it requires a good deal of steady and persistent application.

The Daily Novels

TO ARMS! Many an Indian, Painted red, Scaped a pale-face, Killed him dead. The Indians, redskins that they were, were about to make an attack on the early settlers.

Crouched in ambush, even the squaws had their beaux. (See footnote.) But sh-h-h! A distant rumble notified the Indians of the approach of the stagecoach. R-r-rumble. "Gid-dap!" shouts the driver to his racing horses. "Gid-dap! Don't you know the early settler catches the worm?"

The great vehicle awayed past. With a loud war-whoop the redskins sprang out into the road and gave chase. Suddenly aught was amiss. One of the wheels of the coach came off and seven early settlers spilled profusely upon the ground. Non-plussed, the Indians stood stock still in Cherokee bewilderment. "Twas then that Buffalo Bill himself appeared on the scene.

"Owing to an accident to the stagecoach," he announced, "the great stagecoach scene is called off for the evening."

(Footnote: Bows, a clever play on a primeval implement of warfare.)

Woman's Beauty is Based on Health

To Have Health, Bowel Movement is Absolutely Necessary—How Best to Obtain It.

MRS. JENNIE SNEIDER

If woman's beauty depended upon cosmetics every woman would be a picture of loveliness. But beauty lies deeper than that. It lies in health. In the majority of cases the basis of health, and the cause of sickness, can be traced to the action of the bowels.

The headaches, the lassitude, the sallow skin and the lustreless eyes are usually due to constipation. So many things that women do habitually conduce to this trouble. They do not eat carefully, they eat indigestible foods because the foods are served daintily and they do not exercise enough. But whatever the particular cause may be, it is important that the condition should be corrected.

An ideal remedy for women, and one especially suited to their delicate requirements, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which thousands of women endorse highly.

Mrs. Jennie Sneider, 1044 West Monroe St., Chicago, testifies that she is cured of grave stomach and bowel troubles by using Syrup Pepsin and without the aid of a doctor or any other medicine.

All the family can use Syrup Pepsin, for thousands of mothers give it to babies and children. It is also admirably suited to the requirements of elderly people, in fact to all who by reason of age or infirmity cannot stand harsh salts, cathartics, pills or purgatives. These should always be avoided for at best their effect is only for that day, while a genuine remedy like Syrup Pepsin acts mildly but permanently.

It can be conveniently obtained at any drug store at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded. You will find it gentle, pleasant in taste, and free from gripping, and its tonic properties have a distinct value to women.

It is the most widely used laxative of families are now never without it. If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

THE DAUGHTER OF DAVID KERR

"That's where you misrepresent our side, Mr. Wright," said Kendall. "The undertaking you speak of is perfectly legitimate, for the direct benefit of Belmont. I challenge you to prove that what you have accused us of being about to do is really the intention of this company. Nothing, sir, is farther from it."

"That's all been gone over," Wright said, turning to the lawyer at the head of the table. "There's nothing new to be said along that line. Was it for this you sent for me, Judge Gilbert?"

"No," I asked you to come over here to consider an offer for your paper, is the news for sale?"

"That depends. For sale when applied to a newspaper may sometimes have an ugly meaning."

"Of course," Gilbert was quick to add, "I mean as a newspaper property."

"I'm a poor man, Judge Gilbert," Wright began slowly. "I couldn't refuse to consider an offer."

He got no further, for Kendall exclaimed:

"That's what I thought."

"Wait a minute," Wright asked him, lifting his hand in warning that he had not finished. "You interrupted me before I was through. What I say is this: I couldn't refuse to consider an offer from a proper quarter."

"What does the source matter to you?" Kendall inquired. "You're human. You want money as bad as any of us."

Before replying, Wright's gaze rested for an instant on the door behind which his heart's happiness waited. Her words came to him, strengthening him to meet the tempter: "Remember, dear, in whatever you do, I'm with you. May my love and my confidence support you ever."

"I may want money—need it—worse than any of you," he confessed. "But it must come only one way—honestly. 'Nothin' dishonest 'bout sellin' a paper, is there?" growled Kerr.

"I can't tell in this case until I hear what Judge Gilbert's offer is."

"It's simply this: I have some clients who wish to purchase your paper."

"Mr. Kerr and Mr. Kendall, I suppose."

"Does it make any difference to you?"

"It may to Belmont."

"What's Belmont got to do with it?" asked Kerr.

"A newspaper can't change hands like a stock of groceries," Wright retorted impatiently.

"You know I want to be open and above board with you, Mr. Wright," soothed Gilbert. "So I'll tell you that Mr. Kendall and Mr. Kerr are interested in this offer. I know the paper's mortgaged. What'll you sell for, the purchasers to assume the mortgage and all other debts, and possession to be given this afternoon?"

Wright merely looked at him and shook his head. What he thought he almost hated to say. It hurt him to think that they could believe he would even listen to such a proposition.

"Then," continued Gilbert, "another basis on which to deal would give you nominal control, until after election, but my clients would not expect the paper to be so vehement in its denunciations in the next few days."

"Judge Gilbert," the editor replied quietly, but with great earnestness, "that's an offer I don't thank you for. These men haven't enough money to buy my paper."

"You bought the paper," snarled Kerr in an ugly manner.

"Yes," came the answer right back at him, "but you want to buy my self respect."

The two men glared at each other, but the boss did not deny the assertion. The elder man was beginning to rage inwardly. So accustomed had he become to the exercise of autocratic power in Belmont that he could not reconcile himself to being thwarted, especially when success was so vital to him.

"There's a good profit in it for you," was the conciliatory remark of Judge Gilbert.

"In dollars and cents, perhaps," admitted Wright, "but there are some things that have a greater value than mere money; peace of mind, for instance, and the deserved respect of the community, and honor. I can't sell out the people who are depending on me, the people of Belmont."

The men across the table looked at him as if they thought him crazy. They knew he had foolish ideas, but they had not dreamed he would let such an opportunity slip through his fingers. He was the owner of a newspaper that was losing money every day, and they had as much as asked him to name his own figure for his property. They could not understand how honor was part of the transaction in the sale of a newspaper, even in the last days of a strong fight against the organization. What should he care about the respect of the community when he had money enough to take him out of that community and keep him comfortable until he was ready to get another paper somewhere else to exploit his insane ideas of civic righteousness?

"You are just a little hasty in your judgment, Mr. Wright," Judge Gilbert said, when he saw that the publisher seemed to regard his answer as final.

"Licked! Licked! I've just begun to fight!"

"If you'll consider the matter carefully I think it'll appear to you in this light: Here's a paper that isn't making expenses. A good offer is made you which if you are wise enough to accept will permit you to leave Belmont far richer than when you came. There are other lances to be broken elsewhere. Why tilt here against a stone wall?"

"If it were a stone wall there'd have been no offer," Wright shrewdly enough to know that they must be in desperate straits.

"See here, young man," Kerr blazed, "you won't be able to make a go of it. If you don't sell now I'll see to it that some day the sheriff will."

This direct threat was more than he could bear. Rising from his chair and leaning across the table the publisher shook his fist in Kerr's face and told him just what he thought of the situation. Remembering who was on the other side of the door he was facing, he did not raise his voice, but into his low tones he put all the fire of his honest indignation.

"You may put me down and out, as you boast you can, but you can't buy me out. You've scared advertisers so they're afraid to use my paper, you've had me sued for libel, you've raised my taxes, you've made the railroads hold up my white paper, you've annoyed me in a thousand petty ways, and I'm telling the truth. That's what hurts. You can't stand it."

"God knows Belmont needs somebody to tell the truth! If you took my paper today, who'd stand between the people of Belmont and the wolves? The town's being robbed blind. I'm telling about it, and I believe there are enough honest people to see me through and set the town right. But they need a leader—a newspaper—and I won't sell 'em out."

"For what's coming," he announced sternly, "hold yourself responsible, not me. You forced me to come out with the bald truth of the matter. Maybe you know and maybe you don't know that you of all men are the one I would least care to hold up for the public to see. Today—for the first time—I printed my name at the head of my editorial page. I want people to know that back of the paper's a man—a man that won't sell out, and back of the man I'm going to have the people. Do you hear? Belmont's going to be a clean city."

He leaned across the table and looked the boss straight in the eye, emphasizing his last words by bringing his fist down on the table with each telling point he drove home. It was a duel between him and Kerr; the others merely looked on. Never in all the days of his political activity had a man talked in this fashion to David Kerr. The audacity and fearlessness of the young man aroused his admiration. He did not let that feeling interfere, however, with his intention to destroy him utterly. The Belmont News must be muzzled, and the boss could not permit a matter of sentiment to outweigh a political necessity.

"You'd better go slow, young man," cautioned Kerr. "I ain't played my hand, you know. You've put up a good fight; that's why I'm giving you a good chance to get out without admitting you've been licked."

"Licked! Licked!" echoed Wright with fine disdain. "I've just begun to fight. You're nearer a worse defeat at this minute than you ever were before in all your life. You're going down and the people of Belmont are going to keep you down if I have anything to do with it. Don't insult me by trying to buy my paper. I've the dearest reason in the world for wanting money and for leaving Belmont—but if I go without a dollar I can still hold up my head and look every man in the eye."

Kerr now looked at him without visible show of anger, in that cold, calculating manner he had taught every one to fear.

"Then you won't sell," he said.

"No," shouted Wright, beside himself with indignation at the offer; "I'll see you in hell first."

What further might have been said there is no telling. The words were scarcely out of Wright's mouth when he saw, the door opposite him open and Gloria appear. Instantly he relaxed from his tense, strained manner, and, noting his change, the other men turned to find that David Kerr's daughter was the cause. She stood in the doorway hesitatingly, recognizing that she was interrupting a business meeting.

"I beg your pardon," she said, "but from the window I saw Mrs. Hayes on the street, and I thought I'd go to her."

"I'll join you," Wright announced. He left his place at the table and walked over to where Gloria was standing.

"I suppose the meeting is over," ventured Gilbert.

"It is, as far as I'm concerned," said the newspaper man. Then, looking at Kerr, he added, "I think I've made my position perfectly clear."

"I suppose the meeting is over," ventured Gilbert.

"It is, as far as I'm concerned," said the newspaper man. Then, looking at Kerr, he added, "I think I've made my position perfectly clear."

Gloria's announced intention of rejoining Mrs. Hayes was not the only motive that had brought her into the library. The angry hum of voices had been borne to her even through the closed door, and with a woman's impatience and curiosity she was anxious to know what was going on. Greater than all else, however, was her desire to be with Wright. She thought that by appearing, she could bring matters to a conclusion and carry off with her the man she loved. Now that she was in the library and Wright had said that he was ready to go whenever she was, David Kerr's daughter forgot about her desire to go to Mrs. Hayes.

Dr. Hayes and his wife were returning to Judge Gilbert's office when Gloria had seen them, and soon Williams ushered them into the library. The presence of the two women prevented all open discussion of political matters. Even had it not been for Miss Kerr and Mrs. Hayes there could have been no controversy, because after Wright had made his position clear he would not talk further about it. Now he was merely waiting for Gloria.

"I thought you said you wouldn't be long," was the way, in a playful attempt at seriousness, Gloria upbraided her sovereign lord when they found themselves a little apart from the others.

"It wasn't my fault," was all she could say.

"You haven't told father, have you?" "No. He wasn't in the mood for such a pleasing revelation. I hope you've thought about leaving for St. Louis tonight. It's now imperative that you go."

"I thought about it, dear, but I can't go. What would I say to father?"

DINNER STORIES

Mrs. McGinty had waited long and patiently for her husband to come home on Saturday night with his week's pay. Finally she decided to take the matter in her own hands and she sailed forth to the police station to inquire if he was there.

"Is my Tim here?"

"No," replied the Lieutenant; "but sit down. We're expecting him every minute."

"The ducky," says a southern congressman, "although proverbially improvident, sometimes has his wits open."

"In Mobile one day I gave a quarter to a colored youth who had done me some trifling service. The coin was handed back to me. 'Excuse me, boss,' said the negro; 'yo' knows I don't want no pay fo' what I does fo' yo'.' 'Yo' jes' gimme dat old suit of clothes yo' has on.'"

The legislature of a western state contains this year several women members. At a recent banquet they were invited to speak, but all with one accord began to make excuses and one of the men was asked to represent them.

Singer and Orator.

"I had my way," Dr. Macnamara once confessed to an interviewer. "I should be singing in 'Carmen' instead of making speeches from the treasury bench. But, unfortunately, the British public thinks a great deal more of a man who can make a bad speech than a man who can sing a good song."

Read the bargains in the Want Ads.

He accepted, saying that he was willing to do so, as far as it lay, but that his case was similar to that of a naughty little girl who was told that if she didn't behave she would be shut up in the chicken coop. "You can shut me up in the chicken coop if you want to," replied she, "but I ain't going to lay any eggs."

"You can shut me up in the chicken coop if you want to," replied she, "but I ain't going to lay any eggs."
